IF I ONLY KNEW THEN: PARENTING THE GIFTED CHILD

How can parenting and advocacy work hand-in-hand to improve the life of the gifted child? When do you go too far and risk alienating both child and teacher?

Learn techniques and strategies to improve parenting, mend relationships, and aid advocacy based on research and experience working with gifted children and families.

- Facts and tips will be interwoven with personal accounts to demonstrate effective approaches to improve relationships with children and school districts.
- Real-life stories will be included that show the differences between parenting a typical student and a gifted student.
- Encourage your child to take risks, take ownership of his/her own learning, and empathize with others.

Presented at 9 a.m. in 2355 Schneider Hall by Dr. Kelly Schultz and Nan Janecke of the Academically Talented Youth Program.

Discover what works, what to avoid, and how to advocate and parent without becoming a cliché!
