

Extended University Program Policies

From the WMU/AAUP Contract:

The contract limits the number of Extended University Program courses a faculty member can teach to:

- One course during the Fall or Spring semesters
- One course during a Summer I or Summer II session if the faculty member is also teaching on campus.
- Two courses during a Summer I or Summer II session if the faculty member is not teaching on campus.

From policies of the College of Arts & Sciences:

Faculty who are receiving assigned time for research are not to be assigned to teach Extended University Program courses as overload for the semester in which the assignment is made.

From policies of the Graduate College:

Faculty assigned to teach graduate courses, including all 500-level courses must be members or associate members of the graduate faculty.
