CPFC must consider whether such an addition would be Ex-Officio or a voting member, with the voting category more involved.

An updated marketing campaign has substantially increased click rates, landing pages, unique visitors to the webpages, and return/repeat visits. Sales of brown and gold gear is up. CPFC asked about appropriations and facilities and also recent construction, such as the new Student Center.

Unfinished Business

Regarding the potential CPFC role for a representative from the Office of Sustainability, Heasley provided context and Ex Officio Jellies offered Executive Board counsel. Spoelstra expressed interest and willingness in participating on the council and will consult with Cheatham.

It was moved by Heasley, seconded by Guth, to appoint the Director of the Office for Sustainability or their representative to CPFC in an advisory role. The motion passed with three abstentions.

New Business

Spoelstra provided an overview of WMU sustainability efforts, including: student projects and initiatives through the Office for Sustainability, the university's strategic plan, carbon neutrality planning, new-climate-action-plan initiative, and team-building with the support of President Montgomery. There is the possibility of a future task force, and great potential for outside funding. Bertman discussed climate action and sustainability as central for prospective students, including their choice of schools.
