

The Fort St. Joseph Archaeological Project and Western Michigan University's Institute of Intercultural and Anthropological Studies present:

Archaeological Field School

Summer II: July 9 – August 9, 2024

You are invited to participate in WMU's Archaeological Field School. This is a unique opportunity to fulfill the required experiential learning component of the Anthropology Major, and an exciting way to explore a career in anthropological archaeology.

During this course, you will conduct field work in Niles, Michigan where WMU has teamed up with the City to uncover the past of Fort St. Joseph, an eighteenth-century mission, garrison, and trading post complex. Students will be able to get their hands dirty and help to uncover the fort's history while learning tangible skills for a career in archaeology.

Course: ANTH 4900

Credits: 6 credit hours

Instructor: Erika Hartley

Applications are due March 1, 2024. For more information and to apply please
