The Paradox of Colorblind Racism

Dr. Meghan Burke
Associate Professor of Sociology, Illinois Wesleyan University

How can colorblindness—the idea that race does not matter—be racist? Using examples from across the political spectrum, Professor Burke discusses how to recognize and challenge many forms of contemporary racism so that we can all support racial equality rather than perpetuating harmful social, economic, and political systems.

5pm on Thursday, February 13
Sangren Hall 1910