MEDIEVAL PEOPLE

Medieval People builds upon what its precursor, Medieval Prosopography, sought to do: it is dedicated to highlighting the experiences of unknown or obscure individuals or groups, as well as exploring the social networks that gave shape to the lives of all medieval people. The journal has been updated, however, to reflect the new trends in scholarship and the ever-growing number of tools available to scholars, as well as the rich offerings of digital humanities projects that can assist scholars in developing a deeper and more inclusive understanding of the medieval world. Therefore volume 35 of Medieval Prosopography is the last volume available in print, while volume 36 will be the first volume under the title Medieval People and the first online-only volume of the journal.

Taking Eileen Power’s classic book Medieval People as a touchstone, the inaugural volume of the journal will contain articles that correspond directly with the narratives in Power’s volume. But the focus of the journal has also been updated and expanded to include articles on medieval people who were not included in the original work. These articles align with the journal’s mission to promote the study of overlooked or understudied medieval people and groups.

Submissions Welcome

This journal explores the lives of medieval people of all ranks, periods and places in the medieval world and welcomes submissions that explore a single life, that highlight the important social bonds of an individual or group, or the study of social networks from late antiquity to the sixteenth century. If the editors believe the article is suitable for publication in the journal, it will be evaluated by experts in the field. Articles in the major European languages are invited and will be published in their original language. Please contact Amy Livingstone (alivingstone@bsu.edu) or Charlotte Cartwright (charlotte.cartwright@cnu.edu) with any questions about submissions.

Please see further policies on submissions and submit your entire and completed work at the journal’s ScholarWorks page: scholarworks.wmich.edu/medpros/
