Second Language Education and Applications in America and China

By
Pan, Lei
Lecturer from School of Foreign Languages in Central China Normal University
Wuhan, Hubei

5 p.m. March 21, 2013
Brown Hall 3025

The lecture gives an overview of the education system in China—specifically taking second language education as an example—and compares that to the Chinese language education system in America. The talk will cover the reasons why people choose to learn a second language, the different learning environment they have, the level tests they can take, what learners can do with a second language, what qualifications learners may need if they want to start a language-related career etc..

Sponsored by the Department of World Languages and Literatures
Co-sponsored by the Timothy Light Center for Chinese Studies and the Confucius Institute at WMU