Is the Trade War between US and China Over?

A talk by

Dr. Christina Y. Liu (劉憶如)
Managing director of Bellwether International Group in Hong Kong
Member of Global Council of Asia Society (USA)
Adjunct professor in Finance, National Taiwan University

4:30 PM, Thursday, April 11, 2019
2028 BROWN HALL

Dr. Christina Liu served as the Minister of Finance in Taiwan, the Minister of Council for Economic Planning and Development, and served two terms as a legislator in Taiwan. She also served as the Chief Economic Advisor for Chinatrust Financial Holding in Taiwan and Global Chief Economic Advisor for Daiwa Institute of Research in Tokyo. She had been a Board of Director in several companies, including the Taiwan Fund listed in the NYSE, and the Taiwan Stock Exchange. Dr. Liu received her BA degree in Political Science from National Taiwan University, and her MBA in Finance and Ph.D. in Economics from University of Chicago. Dr. Liu has been a long-term professor in many universities internationally, including Tsinghua University in Beijing, the Chinese University in Hong Kong, Australian National University, the City University of New York, and National Taiwan University. She has also been a long-term columnist for a number of magazines and newspapers in the region.

It has been a year since the start of the trade war between U.S. and China. There is usually no winner in any trade war, and the Sino-US trade war is no exception. What prices has each country paid for this trade war? Can they afford it? What will it take to settle the disputes between them, and how is it possible to really end the trade war between the US and China?