Arctic Security
Mondays and Wednesdays,
4 to 4:50 p.m.
8/28/2019 to 10/25/2019
In the era of climate change, the nature of the Arctic is rapidly evolving, and the Arctic nations have myriad interests at stake. This course will explore Arctic security through regional and global perspectives and will explore concepts of hard security (i.e., militarization) and soft security (i.e., economic, environmental, human, and food).

Anna Kietzerow
Department of Philosophy

Language and Globalization
Mondays and Wednesdays,
12 to 12:50 pm.
8/28/2019 to 10/25/2019
This course will look at the role of language within our modern, globalizing marketplace of ideas. In this class, we will look at the role of language in identity and nation formation and will discuss the critical role that language has played throughout history, both as a unifying and dividing factor.

Jeffrey Angles
Department of World Languages and Literatures

War and Propaganda
Online course
How has the media been used to influence public opinion? How has propaganda altered the worldview of a society in times of war? This course looks at the ways the media has been used to gain support before and during conflict in Europe, Asia, and Africa through the examples of World Wars I and II.

Joyce Busch
Global and International Studies